Judgement of Mars is book five in the Starship Mage series and it does not disappoint. It is filled with the nail biting adventure that readers of this series have come to expect. What I loved most about this book in the series, however, is the way the author has drawn together events from earlier books in the series and shown that they were not individual isolated events, but parts of a larger, more complex tapestry.

Judgment of Mars is the fifth installment of Damien Montgomery's story and I have to say I'm a fan and I really enjoyed reading it. This is another good installment of Damien's story and I think the writing delivers a good balance between the pace and depth of the story which keeps me interested in the characters and their fate.

The Service of Mars is the ninth instalment of the Starship's Mage series. The book is another good instalment of the story with a focus on Roslyn Chambers and to a lesser extent Kelly LaMonte. The characters play interesting and pivotal roles in the progression of the story arc and whilst I'm primarily a Damien Montgomery fan, I really enjoyed the book and think it is a worthy addition to the series.
