Believing is the opposite of knowing. If you believe something, you don't know something.

Believing vs thinking. When speaking or writing, I avoid ...

In more academic or philosophical discussions, thinking is a personal act of the mind, based on available knowledge. Believing involves an act of the mind, and an act of the will. It is one step beyond thinking. "I think that God exists" means I have thought about it, and it the arguments that a God exists makes sense to me.
